Friday, August 19 1-2:30 pm	Designing materials for spoken English No matter how good a textbook is, classroom teachers still need to create materials for more in-depth practice within the classroom. With a monolingual classroom, communicative activities which force students to speak English are a must. Basic steps in designing materials will be discussed with many activities shared and evaluated.
Friday, August 19 3:30-5 pm	Teaching Language and Literature at Secondary Level Students hardly like to read in their native language, let alone a second/foreign one. What are some strategies to increase motivation in reading literature? Strategies that integrate literature with language teaching and that help make text come alive will be discussed and explored. Extensive reading will also be reflected upon in this workshop.
Saturday, August 20 11-2 pm	Web-based technology in the classroom The majority of students in today's classrooms are digital natives -- people whose interaction with modern technology on a daily basis becomes second nature. Teachers need to use that technology in their classrooms to create activities that increase motivation and interest in their students. Low cost to free technology will be examined, discussed and played with in this workshop.
